Dear Mr. Leonard,

Enclosed is information concerning the new Women's Studies Program to be operating in the Fall at San Diego State College. It is the first complete Women's studies program to be offered in the nation. The program is an autonomous program (similar to a Department but not granting a degree) with faculty to be recruited, etc.

I'm particularly interested in getting information about the Women's Studies Program ^{to you} because mutual interest and experience in the education reform movement. The students who developed the Program are committed to non-authoritarian, student oriented educational processes as a result of past experience in developing the Experimental College and involvement in student power issues, etc. (You may remember talking once with Lonnie Rowell about the "Educational Circus" which involved Harold Taylor and others?)

Anyway I am impressed with recent coverage in Look on education and would be pleased if we could work together to cover the Women's Studies Program. If you or someone else is interested please call at 714-465-6195.

Sincerely,
Carol Rowell
